

DAS42 ELT Reference Architecture

The following diagram details the flow of data through our preferred technological architecture. All data is captured and stored raw in a data lake, transformed as needed, and served up in a business-friendly format on demand.

This stack is our favorite for achieving data governance and democratizing your data in a timely manner, but keep in mind that every organization is different – so your solution may require customization.

